A separate bill for each individual claim is generally submitted But in some cases as for instance when Kandayam is partly remitted on account of drought &c. by means of a general order & collections are made before receipt of the order, a bill including all the individuals entitled to the benefit of the order is submitted & passed. A separate bill in each individual case for a small sum would call for extra labor - in such cases. Submitted for orders

General and Revenue departments

Sir,

The practice of casting refund Bills which are payable to several parties on the appearance of one and the crediting of the balance thereof to deposits is not only irregular and opposed to Codal rules but also entails considerable extra labour both in the Treasury and this office in encumbering the deposit account with these Items. I have the honour therefore to request that District Officers and Heads of departments who submit refund Bills may be instructed not to group several claims into one Bill, but to submit a Schauta Bill for each individual claim.

I have the honour to be

Your most obedient Servant
